happy, angry, sad, tired, sleepy, hungry, thirsty, sick, busy, very, a little

- "I'm very thirsty."

Communication Activity

Materials:

- Textbook topic page

Steps:

1. Pick one student to come to the front and secretly show them a vocabulary word from the textbook.
2. The chosen student acts out the emotion without speaking.
3. All other students ask, "Are you ____?" to guess the emotion.
4. If it is correct, the student answers with, "Yes, I'm a little/very ____."
5. If students struggle, display vocabulary pictures on the TV.
6. Switch to a new student after each round to give as many students as possible a turn.

Extra Fun Tips

- Whiteboard Draw: One student draws a face expressing an emotion on the whiteboard while the group asks, "Are you ____?" and tries to guess the feeling.
- Tone of Voice: Assign an action to each emotion. Have students say "I'm ____." using a tone of voice and physical action that matches the feeling (e.g., a sleepy voice for "sleepy").

General Teaching Tips

- Intonation: Practice the rising intonation for the question "Are you OK?" versus the falling intonation for the answer "I'm fine."
- Transition Drill: While cleaning up, show emotion pictures on the TV. Ask finishing students, "Are you ____?" and require a full "Yes, I am" or "No, I'm not" response before they sit down.
